		Subtitle: Forensics NOTE: Meets General Education IVB. Forensics is where the fields of science and law meet, often to solve crimes. This course will introduce the study of forensics with an emphasis placed on crime scene processing as well as the evidence that is recovered during these investigations. While the course will focus on the science used in solving crimes, students should note that potentially sensitive matters such as violent crimes and death investigations will be discussed.
*2282	BIOL 110-610	INTRO TO ENVIRONMENTAL SCIENCE	3	LEC MW	04:00PM	-05:15PM	HS 337	GUNTHER
		NOTE: Meets General Education IVB (Prior to Fall 2008: IIIB). This class is being taught as a hybrid for Fall 2020. Students will be assigned one FTF session either Monday or Wednesday that they will be expected to attend all semester. This will allow for FTF instruction while maintaining social distancing. Check MyClasses to see which FTF session you have been assigned. You MUST attend the session day you have been assigned.

NOTE: History 430, The Late Roman Empire, explores the society of the Mediterranean world from the fourth through mid-sixth centuries CE-the time of Constantine through Justinian. We will engage with a number of aspects of ancient Roman culture such as identity, immigration, social justice, gender roles, citizenship, and religious pluralism. By studying these issues in their ancient context, students will not only gain an appreciation for our human past, but also a better understanding of how these issues are critically relevant today.

Subtitle:		Drinking in America: A History
NOTE: This course explores the social and cultural history of alcohol in the United States from the late 18th century to today. The so-called "liquor question" has historically been linked to gender, class, ethnicity as well as economics, public policy, and civil liberties. We consider the relationship between changing drinking habits and various forms of control, most importantly temperance and prohibition. Why did the working-class saloon become such an American institution and why did it die out. Why did national prohibition succeed? Studying the cultural politics of drinking provides a window into modern American society and helps us understand today's attitudes and policies around alcohol."

NOTE: "Asynchronous (online) delivery will be an option." This team-taught one-credit course will consist of a series of lectures and discussions led by SU Faculty members from a variety of disciplines along with guest speakers and community members. The course is designed to facilitate your exploration of the relevant, complex, and at time volatile topic of food and sustainability in the twenty-first century. Areas of focus include food waste, food and culture, inequality in the production, distribution, and consumption of food, the impact of local food systems on social and environmental sustainability, and much more. You will also become informed about opportunities in the local community to put what you learn into action. This course has no prerequisites, and can only be taken pass fail. It will meet Monday evenings from 7:00-8:30, and in addition

NOTE: Based on the multi-step Interdisciplinary Research Process (IRP) discussed by Allen F. Repko and Rick Szostak (Interdisciplinary Research: Process and Theory, 3rd edition), students will deepen their understanding of the ways in which disciplines interact and relate to each other and use basic research skills from a variety of disciplines to produce a research report, creative product, or professional project. Using basic interdisciplinary research techniques enables students to gain insight into the ways in which they perceive
